Hangouts chrome extension change account

Gmail raised the bar for what we expect in an email service. But if you only use its original features, you'll just get a taste of its power. There are a host of Chrome extensions that expand Gmail's features and help you streamline your workflow. Here are four you need to install today. Full contact Most of us have a similar reaction when we receive an email from a new professional contact. We immediately try to learn more about them by searching their profiles on LinkedIn, Facebook, Twitter and other social networks. Full contact eliminates this legwork by specifying job titles, business information, and social accounts for each e-mail sender. Without leaving your inbox, you can scroll through their Facebook posts, tweets, and other social updates. Add your own notes, and then sync all of the contact's information with your address book so you always have it at your fingertips. Snapmail We do not recommend that you send passwords and similarly sensitive material via e-mail. But if you absolutely must, this Mission Impossible= style extension will ensure your message is seen by authorized eyes only. Snapmail Snapmail encrypts and destroys sensitive emails. It adds a Snapmail button next to the Send button in the message. When you tap it, the message is encrypted and a URL is created for the message that is sent to the recipient. When they follow the link, a countdown clock informs them that the message will self-destruct for 60 seconds. MixMax MixMax lives up to its promise to make email awesome. The extension adds a host of must-have features to Gmail, including email tracking, one-click business templates, and late-late schedules. MixMax adds more features to Gmail, including instant meeting planning. Its instant scheduling is especially useful for setting up one-on-one meetings. MixMax does all the heavy lifting so you and the other party don't have to email back and forth to find a time that works for both of you. You choose free times in your Google Calendar, and MixMax adds them to your email. The recipient selects the one that works for them, and MixMax places it in your calendar and sends each of you a confirmation message. It's like having your own personal assistant. MailTrack MailTrack removes the mystery of missed emails. This extension is a simple email tracker that uses checkmarks to keep you apprised by your message status. It adds a check mark next to the message when it is sent, and adds another after the message has been read. Best of all, it can tell you exactly which recipients have read a message sent to multiple parties. The MailTrack MailTrack extension tells you which recipients have read your email, even in a mass message. MailTrack's basic features are free for an unlimited number of emails. For $3.50 a month you can add options, real-time desktop notifications and daily tracking-activity reports. Note: When you buy something after links in our articles, we can earn a small commission. Read our affiliate link policy for more details. Google Chrome is the most dominant web browser out there, and with thousands of optional extensions to make the online experience more personalized and convenient, it's easy to understand why. You can browse available extensions through the Chrome Web Store, but unless you're looking for an add-on link to a product you're already using (for example, Microsoft Word). We examined the most used, talked about and recommended Chrome extensions for work use and compiled a list of our favorites for 2018.Credit: AdBlocker UltimateAdBlocker UltimateIt is pretty easy to guess what AdBlocker Ultimate is doing. This free extension allows users to remove ads on websites (including YouTube advertisements) and browse freely without distraction or tracking. AdBlocker Ultimate also blocks domains that are suspicious or known malware. Credit: Nimbus CaptureNimbus CaptureThere has lots of screenshot extensions out there, but Nimbus Capture not only allows users to capture and edit screenshots (in whole or in part), but also record screencasts or other videos (including webcam video and embedded videos) directly from your screen. Users can easily share saved screencasts on YouTube or Google Drive, but it requires a Premium membership. Fortunately, the basic extension is free. Credit: KamiKamiKami is a convenient PDF and document markup extension that runs offline and works with other Google products (like Google Drive and Google Classroom). Kami offers users plenty of options to add comments, highlight text, drawing and editing, and the basic version is free. Credit: PixelBlockPixelBlockIf you receive lots of promotional and sales emails, or if you just want to unlock your Gmail privacy, give PixelBlock a try. This free extension alerts you when someone tries to track an email you read (by displaying a small red-eye icon) and automatically blocks the attempt. Credit: TodoistTodoistPerfect for multitasking entrepreneurs, Todoist is a great app that lets you collaborate with team members, keep track of projects, manage deadlines, share and delegate tasks, save websites, access tasks offline and set SMS reminders and push notifications directly from your browser. Todoist is also integrated with mobile devices and calendar apps, such as Credit: Awesome ScreenshotAwesome ScreenshotScreenshot is a well named extension that makes it easy to capture full-page and partial page screenshots, blur sensitive information, record screen as video, annotate images and share what you capture via Google Drive. This free extension is a must-have for business users who often need to store and share info from website, video chat and webcasts. Credit: Social BladeSocial Bladelf growing your social media influence (or tracking the competition) a lot of your job, Social Blade extension can just save you time and give you valuable insight. Social Blade allows users to track statistics and growth across social media sites, and the extension automatically displays statistics for videos and posts you consume (without having to click away from YouTube, Twitter, Instagram or TwitchTV). Credit: MomentumMomentumWhile it's not strictly a business extension, Momentum earned a place on our list because it's a great way to motivate yourself, stay focused and make your browsing experience a little softer and more personal. Momentum allows users to design their own dashboard, complete with inspirational quotes, soothing images, to-do lists, reminders, focus times, local weather and more. The productivity dashboard can be accessed when you open a new tab, and while it may sound silly, plenty of productivity pros (including Tim Ferriss) swear by it. Credit: OneTabOneTabIf you regularly have a few dozen tabs open at a time, you're late for an extension like OneTab. Having lots of tabs open slows down machine performance, but with one click OneTab brings together URLs for each open tab in a list that not only speeds up your computer (since less memory is being used), but also makes the way easier to see the links you need. Credit: LinkedInThis extension from LinkedIn is great for lead development, and the free version (there's a Premium subscription available as well) is surprisingly valuable. With the free version, users can do things like view LinkedIn profile data for contacts directly in Gmail and see shared connections, experiences, and interests. LinkedIn Sales Navigator also allows users to hover over email addresses and view LinkedIn profile information directly in Gmail.Credit: GrammarlyGrammarlyGrammarly is a wildly popular Chrome extension that automatically emphasizes errors (spelling, word selection, and grammar) as you type, and offers corrected suggestions. The free extension brings the power of Grammar to everything you write online, from Gmail to social media, making it a great app for workers across all industries. Credit: DocuSignDocuSignDocuSign is a free no-brainer extension that makes managing digital signatures super easy. With DocuSign, users can add signatures to emails (in Gmail) and PDFs, and send documents that require signatures. This extension is ideal for companies with many internal or external contracts. Credit: HoneyHoneyTechnically, Honey is not a business extension so much as a shopping extension, but the savings Honey users have access to make it a must-have for business and personal shopping. When Honey users shop online, the extension automatically checks the Internet for available coupon codes and enters any valid codes in the payment box for you. there is really no downside. With Chrome, you can even links from web pages directly to your mobile phone. You can continue your browsing, online research, or streaming where you left off without Required. The official Chrome for Phone extension is no longer available, but there's a way to get the same functionality with Google Sync. Even better, you can use Google Sync with any computer or smartphone. This feature lets you sync all your Google services, including Gmail, Contacts, Calendar, and yes, Chrome. You can access your browsing history and important bookmarks across all your devices. When you turn on Google Sync, you can: Access your bookmarks from any device. View your browsing history and any open windows. Access to the same passwords, auto-fill information, settings, and settings across devices. Open Chrome on your computer. Sign in to your Google Account. At the top right of your Chrome browser, select your profile picture. Then choose Turn on sync. Your open web pages and bookmarks will now sync to the same Google Account on your smartphone. Open the Chrome app to view it. To see your open web pages, go to Recent Tabs under the Chrome app on your phone. To see all your bookmarks, go to Bookmarks under the Chrome app menu. When Google Sync is active and you're signed in, you'll also automatically sign in to all your other Google products. Your information syncs perfectly across all your devices, so you can stay informed and up to date. If you later decide that Google Sync isn't right for you, you can turn it off with the following steps: Open Chrome on your computer. At the top right of your Chrome browser, select your profile picture. Select Sync is for. In the Options window that appears, choose Turn Off. Turning off sync doesn't affect anything. You can still view and access your browsing history and bookmarks on all your previously synced devices. But keep in mind that if you make new changes (such as a bookmark for an important Google document on your laptop), it won't sync with your mobile phone. Google Sync makes it easy and easy to share links and web pages across your different devices. You can set it up with a few keystrokes, and you don't need to install additional Chrome extensions. Thanks for letting us know! Tell us why! Why!
